PEDAGOGICAL TOOLS AND EDUCATIONAL TECHNOLOGY

Reframe: Recursive Critical Method Engine 2025–Present

Open-source critical theory framework engine applying 70+ configurable frameworks (disability justice, critical race theory, feminist pedagogy) to AI system design and pedagogical reflection. Deployed in current courses; free-tier options ensure economic accessibility. Source code available upon request.

Autograder4Canvas 2025–Present

Teacher resource software that uses automation to free teachers to focus on what really matters. Grades complete/incomplete assignments and discussion forums, flags for academic integrity as burnout signal, generates class-wide insights, and processes student submissions in any language or format (e.g., voice recordings).

Podcast Editing Toolkit for Students 2025–Present

Audio preprocessing and interactive GUI editing software (Python/Tkinter) deployed in current courses to support student podcast production. Includes AI-assisted editorial feedback workflows and non-destructive editing interfaces. Open-source; available upon request.

Student Accessibility Scripts and Guides 2025–Present

Tools and documentation deployed in current courses supporting multiple submission formats (text, audio, video, handwritten, home language), text-to-speech integration, and disability justice–informed course design. Available upon request.

"Ethnic Studies Is a Strike" Pedagogical Framework and Booklet 2025

Completed 50+ page pedagogical resource outlining principles and practices of student-led, consensus-based learning, honoring the 1968–69 student strikes that created Ethnic Studies. Available upon request.
